My goal is to see clients to recovery as quickly as possible, and protect against insurance and defence tactics.

Since articling with McLeod Law in 1999, Matthew has developed a specialized practice in the personal injury. He primarily represents plaintiffs but also acts for the defence on behalf of the Alberta Government when lawsuits are brought against unknown persons or persons without insurance. As a result, he has extensive knowledge and experience from both perspectives. Matthew has appeared before the Provincial and Queen's Bench levels of Court in Alberta.
