So you want to be a member of your condo board...now what?

Stephanie D. Whyte

December 3, 2018

Condominium board members are vital to the welfare of a condo project. They have a legal obligation to act in the best interests of the owners of the condo corporation. The Board manages and maintains the property and holds the financial contributions of the owners in trust. Without a Board of Directors, a Condo Corporation simply cannot operate.

Stephanie Whyte of the McLeod Law Condominium Group shares an update on the obligations and policies of being Condo Board member, published in the Canadian Condominium Institute (CCI) Condo Insider.
